Private Reported 'Killed' in Action Is Found to Be Alive. MUNIC, IND.—"Killed in action," nearly two years ago in Europe, according to the war department, Pvt. Gene Jackson has returned from the "dead" and hopes to spend his next Christmas with his family.

Two years ago the war department notified Jackson's wife, Esther, of Nashville, Tenn., and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jackson, Muncie, of his death.

Recently his mother received two letters from Gene, who now is recuperating in an army hospital in Washington, Germany. He wrote: "I'm all right now, but I don't remember much. I hope to be home for Christmas."

In the letters to his mother, Gene said he had been injured in the arm and knee and also had been an uninvited victim. When he woke up, he said, he found himself in La Vallee, France. From there he was taken to St. Etienne.

Newcastle Outbreaks Continue to Increase

New outbreaks of Newcastle disease, the serious chicken ailment which had appeared in 21 states, must be detected promptly if further rapid spread is to be checked.

The American Foundation for Animal Health has urged farmers to be constantly on the alert for signs of nerve disorders in their flocks, such as trembling, throwing the head down between the legs, fluffed feathers, difficult breathing, or a condition that looks like a "cold" may also be checked.

Because this is a virus disease, and the symptoms may often be obscure, the veterinarian generally has to resort to laboratory tests to be certain that the disease is present.

Blindfolded Man Jumps to Death

Despondent and Jobless He Gives Up the Struggle.

PHILADELPHIA — Stanley De Beer, 36, out of a job and despondent, sat down at his desk on the 10th floor at the Bilt-Carlton hotel recently. He wrote a note to his wife, Helen, addressed to their home at Drexel Hill, and enclosed all the money he had left—$115.

He wrote another note, to police, telling them to notify his brother-in-law, Herman Schulhoff, 3224 N. 13th street.

Then he tied a handkerchief around his head as a blindfold, stepped to the open window, climbed onto the sill and jumped out.

His body, just missing a window cleaner at work on the first floor, landed on the street near the hotel entrance. An elevator operator, Anna Cavallero of 322 Federal street, standing just inside the doorway, saw the body land and screamed. Then she called police.

It was the second blindfold leap in the center city area in as many days. Wilbur H. Beckel, after placing a canvas money bag over his head as a hood, leaped to his death from the ninth floor of the Land Title Bank & Trust company building, a block from the scene of De Beer's leap.

De Beer's body landed a few feet from Leslie Whitley, Negro, of 1530 Swain street, the window washer. Other employees of the hotel ran to the scene, and stood by until the body was removed to Hahnemann hospital.

De Beer's note to his wife expressed his sorrow over the step he was taking. Besides his wife, he leaves a child, Roy.

Schulhoff said De Beer, who lost his job with an automobile finance company a year ago, had dinner at his home recently and appeared then to be depressed.

De Beer registered at the hotel intending to be alone for a few days, in the hope this would help calm his nerves, Schulhoff said.
